STEPHEN HOFFMAN JOINS NAUTILUS AS PROJECT CONSULTANT

COMMACK, NY – June 29, 2007 – Nautilus Consulting announces that Stephen Hoffman has joined the firm as a Project Consultant in the Commack, New York office. His responsibilities will include analyzing project documentation, CPM schedules & cost estimates in support of engagements in the claims consulting practice, as well as providing owners and contractors with direct CPM scheduling and cost estimating support.

Prior to joining Nautilus, Steve obtained significant experience as part of the claims consulting group of an international construction consulting organization. During this time, Steve focused on analyzing construction disputes, while working with claims analysts, surety, and project controls professionals. Steve's experience also includes the forensic recreation of baseline construction schedules and associated monthly updates, and graphically depicting the results utilizing the most current software packages. This information is often used to refute or support a claim for additional compensation and/or to create a recovery schedule on troubled projects.

Some of Steve's most recent experience includes the investigation into construction defects in a 51-story building in NYC, during which time he was responsible for documenting and tracking the repair of thousands of construction deficiencies. Steve was also recently involved in the baseline schedule development for a $1.4 billion water filtration project, and the performance of monthly schedule updating for a co-generation facility.
